Research Experience

University of Tennessee – Knoxville

Research assistant for Dr. Deborah Rhatigan

July 2008 – Present

Study Title: Women's Health Study.

Role: Project Director

This project is designed to prospectively examine risk and protective factors for re-abuse among a sample of community women exposed to intimate partner violence. My duties include participant recruitment, interview scheduling, follow-up recruitment, and conducting assessments. The assessments involve the administration of structured clinical interviews, specifically the CAPS and SCID (depression and substance abuse/dependence modules) and a battery of questionnaires. Administrative duties include the supervision of data entry and reliability coding by undergraduate students, management of study materials and participant recruitment, and attending weekly meetings to discuss assessments and assignments.

Grand Valley State University

Research assistant for Dr. Tara Cornelius

August 2006 – April 2008

Study Title: Antecedents, Consequences, and Possible Functional Processes in Perpetration of Intimate Partner Violence.

Role: Researcher

This study was designed to assess the Bell and Naugle (2008) framework for intimate partner violence perpetration using a sample of college students. My duties included the theoretical development, methodological design, data collection, and data entry. Data collection included a semi-structured interview with male perpetrators and victims of dating violence, as well as the administration of a battery of questionnaires. Administrative duties included attending weekly meetings to discuss data collection.

Research assistant for Dr. Brian Lakey

January 2007 – April 2008

Study Title: The Relationship between Capitalization Support and Perceived Social Support.

Role: Primary Investigator

This project was designed to investigate possible similarities between capitalization and perceived support using generalizability theory. My duties included the theoretical development, methodological design, participant recruitment, data collection, data entry, and data analysis. Administrative duties included the management of study materials and assigning research credit to participants.
